

MediData: How many types of medical marijuana are for sale?

Roger Collier, CMAJ

Tough to say for sure. As of July 14, there were about 240 cannabis strains mentioned on the websites of Canada's 13 licensed medical marijuana growers. That drops to about 220 if you remove duplicate names. Some strains, however, are sold under different names by different companies. Many of the strains listed on the websites aren't yet in production. According to what the growers say on their websites, they plan to sell the following number of strains.

Of course, these figures could change at any time. Two growers don't yet mention any products on their websites and the list of strains on other websites change frequently. Canna Farms, in British Columbia, has a lengthy "complete strain list" but had only a few products for sale as of July 14. And many other companies are applying to Health Canada for licences and may offer different types of cannabis.
